CONTEMPORARY MILWAUKEE LIFESTYLE

A vacation is nothing without splurging on a little soul food, especially when that food is created with pure Wisconsin style. Smyth, locate inside The Iron Horse Hotel in the heart of downtown, is one of Milwaukee's premier dining experiences, combining a succulent array of worldwide cuisines with a unique and inviting atmosphere.

"Smyth isn't just a restaurant," says executive chef Thomas Schultz. "From the moment you walk through the door of the hotel, you are awe-struck by how unique, yet comfortable everything is. Smyth is an experience. It's not just where you go to eat." The vibrant, yet welcoming atmosphere boldly attests this fact. The weathered leather booths, contrasted perfectly by the raw wooden tables and chairs emphasize the impressive past of this warehouse turned boutique hotel. And that's without even mentioning the food.

"Food is what can make or break your day," says Schultz. "You can have a horrible day and then bite into something absolutely wonderful and delicious, and all of a sudden you can't help but feel the shiver in your body and be happy." Schultz's food does this and more. The restaurant seeks to give a one of a kind, handmade feel to every dish that comes out of the kitchen, furthering the traditions of the blacksmiths for whom the restaurant was named. The well-trained chefs utilize the truly diverse array of Wisconsin products, like walleye, bluegill, Carr Valley cheeses, and of course, beer, to tantalize the taste buds and create mouthwatering menu selections.

"This is a great outlet to help put Milwaukee on the map as a culinary city," says Schultz. It's a great way to show the rest of the world what Milwaukee has to offer." When the sun sets and the nine to five work force venture home to their beds, the real Milwaukee fun begins.
